

UPSKIRT

dirty (un) feminist secrets a big thank-you to all all those whose secrets make up this zine. xoxo.

these dirty (un)feminist secrets aren't ironic, hip or apost' anything. these secrets aren't about being a white, self-identified feminist, wearing american apparel's newest 'afrika' line of animal prints and knowing that it's fucked up (but doing it anyway). it's not about having never lived in a ghetto or coming from a history of being ghettoized but throwing the word ~~XXXXXX~~ around with your other
'post-racist' friends like you own the word.

... why is it so stressful ... being a feminist? why is it that i feel like everything i say ... and do has to be perfectly aligned with my politics? bloody hell, i like watching normative porno

but but ...
afterwards, i just feel really... bad... like i've betrayed my feminist self. even worse, i wonder how i could call myself a feminist when i get off on porn that features nameless women who probably get treated like shit.

there is definitely an element of stress to being a feminist. in fear of being judged, i become scared to talk, afraid to ask questions, anxious about engaging.

gotta know the right things.
gotta give the right response.
gotta keep up.

i am afraid to say

and do the things that i know are fucked up...even when i'm in the process of undoing those exact demons of internalized racism and sexism

.

sometimes, it feels like i haven't been the feminist that i have set out to be.

and that feels disjointed and shitty.

but i guess the very thing that makes feminism so tiring and scary is the same thing that makes me feel empowered and proud to be a feminist. maybe it works like this:

the feminism i want to be a part of works from a place that believes empowerment and agency can only be achieved through taking intersectional identities and concerns seriously and by placing intersectionalities at the forefront, nothing i say and do slips under the radar.

my feminism doesn't let me slip by with my burdens and oppressions without examining my privileges. it's scary
and anxiety-inducing because it doesn't let anything slide by; it covers every aspect of my life. so, the very thing that makes identifying as a feminist stressful is the same thing that makes me feel like feminism is a politic that is so real, so crucial and so needed.

... it's so important to be reminded that our secrets aren't the be-all-end-all of our selves and the politics that are so dear to our lives.

when my thoughts or actions aren't congruent with my feminist politics i try to take a step back and remind myself of the following things:

'anti-oppressive politics is a tiring shit! you will burn out if you are not allowed to trip up from time to time.'

'hey, be kinder to yourself!'

funny enough, telling myself those things is exactly what gives me more energy to pick myself up and move towards a better emotional and mental place, which i believe are fundamental elements to feminist autonomy and empowerment.

the rest of the zine is a compilation of anonymous secrets sent in by various self-identified feminists, including some of my own.

i hate it when my body looks feminine. it makes me feel weak(er).

... i get angry ...
-- towards women who
-- start off a statement with 'i might be wrong, ... but ...'

or 'i'm not sure -
- but ...' even though i know it's fueled by deeply - engrained sexism that is so difficult to undo.

i shudder to think of all the money i have wasted on useless things to try to look good.

i have a closet that has items that still have the price tags on.

... violence.
more specifically,
hitting and hurting
women. of course, all-violence-against women i take part in is consensual and sexy, but i doubt many feminists would feel the same way about it.
for me, the bloodier,
the better.

i feel bad that i trim my pubes
because the reasons for why i do it are fucked up.

i cannot cum unless i'm picturing a stereotypically hot woman being humiliated by hetero partner(s). the more she looks like an anime character, the better. tentacle sex, being fucked up the ass and vag by two different partners at once, being offered up on a silver platter (literally) for some roman general to feast on...not your stereotypical feminist sex fare.

why not... because the chick has no agency. she is a total piece-of-ass sex object.

and that's hot.

i haven't told a partner this yet. it doesn't matter how tender or loving our sex is...this is what i'm thinkin' about.

i've cried to get out of handing papers in on time or even at all, when i don't really have an excuse i feel like every anti/non feminist thing i do, i try to validate in my head and convince myself that it is subverting the system.

i present myself more femme when i am trying to get with a guy...

and more boy-ish when i am trying with a girl.

i've been a part of threesomes where i feel good about myself because the guy gets really turned on by watching the other girl and i fuck. those threesomes are more about pleasing the guy than anything else.

i think that some feminist theory is dead boring and completely theoretically unsophisticated.

i feel intense validation
from men
who cat call,
whistle or ogle me in the streets.

i still obsess about my weight and appearance.

some of my best friends are punk rock boys who don't know or care about what riot grrl is.

trashy celebrity culture.
fancy drugs.
expensive foods.
brand names.
i even hate myself
for this.

not eating and feeling feeling good about
it. then losing weight and feeling really good about that.

i can't stop saying . . .

'crazy' and 'insane'.

i read romance novels.

i suspect this may be strongly related - more often than i really care to admit i want to be rescued, to not have to be responsible for myself .

i masturbate to violent

rape porn.

when i listen to hip-hop songs where the guy sings about giving his girl bling and rides in his sweet car, i want to be that girl. i really want a man to buy me a diamond rock to wear on my finger. i don't want it to mean anything in particular. i don't want fancy clothes or to be girly. i want to keep wearing my scummy clothes, be smelly and boyish...but i want a fucking rock on my finger.

i hate it when qpoos (queers of colour) make me feel bad for dating white people. i never confront them about it b/c i don't want to be cast out from these communities.

...i on never fought back or reported
the man

...who sexually assaulted me.

i had unprotected sex with this guy several times, even when we had condoms at hand. i just never spoke up once we started doing it. i am perpetuating, in him, the idea that it's okay for guys to have unprotected sex because there aren't consequences for him.

i find myself being attracted to people with really shitty politics. sometimes,

i put my politics aside if it means getting ass.

~~xxx~~

~~xx~~ the secrets in this zine are anything but 'post'. there are some of us who keep these secrets to ourselves and it makes us feel alone and like we are going to lose our minds. feminists are expected to be tough and strong (whatever that is supposed to mean...). but this s is so not the case. so many feminists are fucked up and are trying so hard to unlearn, undo and heal. our secrets force us to find ways to cope, to make it through each day. and this collection of dirty (un)feminist secrets is only a small, small sample of all the ~~secrets~~ secrets feminists keep to themselves keep ~~fx~~ fighting.

keep living.

peterborough & toronto, ontario january 2009

please send comments, questions, love/hate mail, your stories to teresa at poopytoothpaste@gmail
.com

the cover image was hand-drawn, one cover
at a time.

